

SUBSTITUTE SPECIFICATION

ABSTRACT

A network recording system includes a recording server and a terminal device. The terminal device includes a receiving unit for receiving a designation of a program to be recorded, from a user, a selecting unit for selecting a user profile to which the user belongs, and a transmitting unit for transmitting recording instruction information to the recording server, the recording instruction information includes a combination of a program ID identifying the program to be recorded and user profile information showing the user profile to which the user belongs. The recording server includes a reception unit for receiving the recording instruction information from the terminal device, a recording unit for receiving the program identified by the program ID, and a counting unit for counting, for each of a plurality of user profiles, a number of times each program ID has been received by the reception unit.